

Big Five Personality Test Results

Openness: 0%

A score below 20 reflects very low openness. You strongly prefer facts over theories, stability over experimentation, and routine over exploration. You likely excel in rule-based, highly structured environments. You may excel in highly rule-bound and fact-focused careers such as auditing, banking, or compliance, where tradition and accuracy are key.

Conscientiousness: 0%

A score below 20 reflects very low conscientiousness. You resist external control, rules, or structure and work best when free from deadlines. Routine and discipline may feel stifling. You may excel in highly independent and unstructured creative roles such as visual arts or filmmaking.

Extraversion: 0%

A score below 20 shows extreme introversion. You prefer working entirely alone, often in slow-paced, highly independent settings. Minimal interaction is ideal. You may excel in very independent, low-interaction careers such as night security, forest ranger, or solo artistic work.

Agreeableness: 0%

A score below 20 suggests very low agreeableness. You are blunt, critical, and highly autonomous. You prefer facts over feelings and can handle conflict with ease. You're effective in roles requiring hard truths and strategic decisions. You may excel in highly analytical and strategic careers requiring blunt honesty and independence, like litigation, security consulting, or investigative journalism.

Neuroticism: 0%

A score below 20 reflects exceptional emotional stability. You are nearly unshakable in the face of chaos, pressure, or crisis. You stay focused, rational, and calm when others panic. You may excel in extreme-stress or crisis leadership roles like trauma surgery, military leadership, or crisis negotiation.
